HEALTH ETHICS

Health ethics refers to the moral principles that guide healthcare professionals — including doctors and nurses — in making fair, respectful, and honest decisions, especially in complex situations.

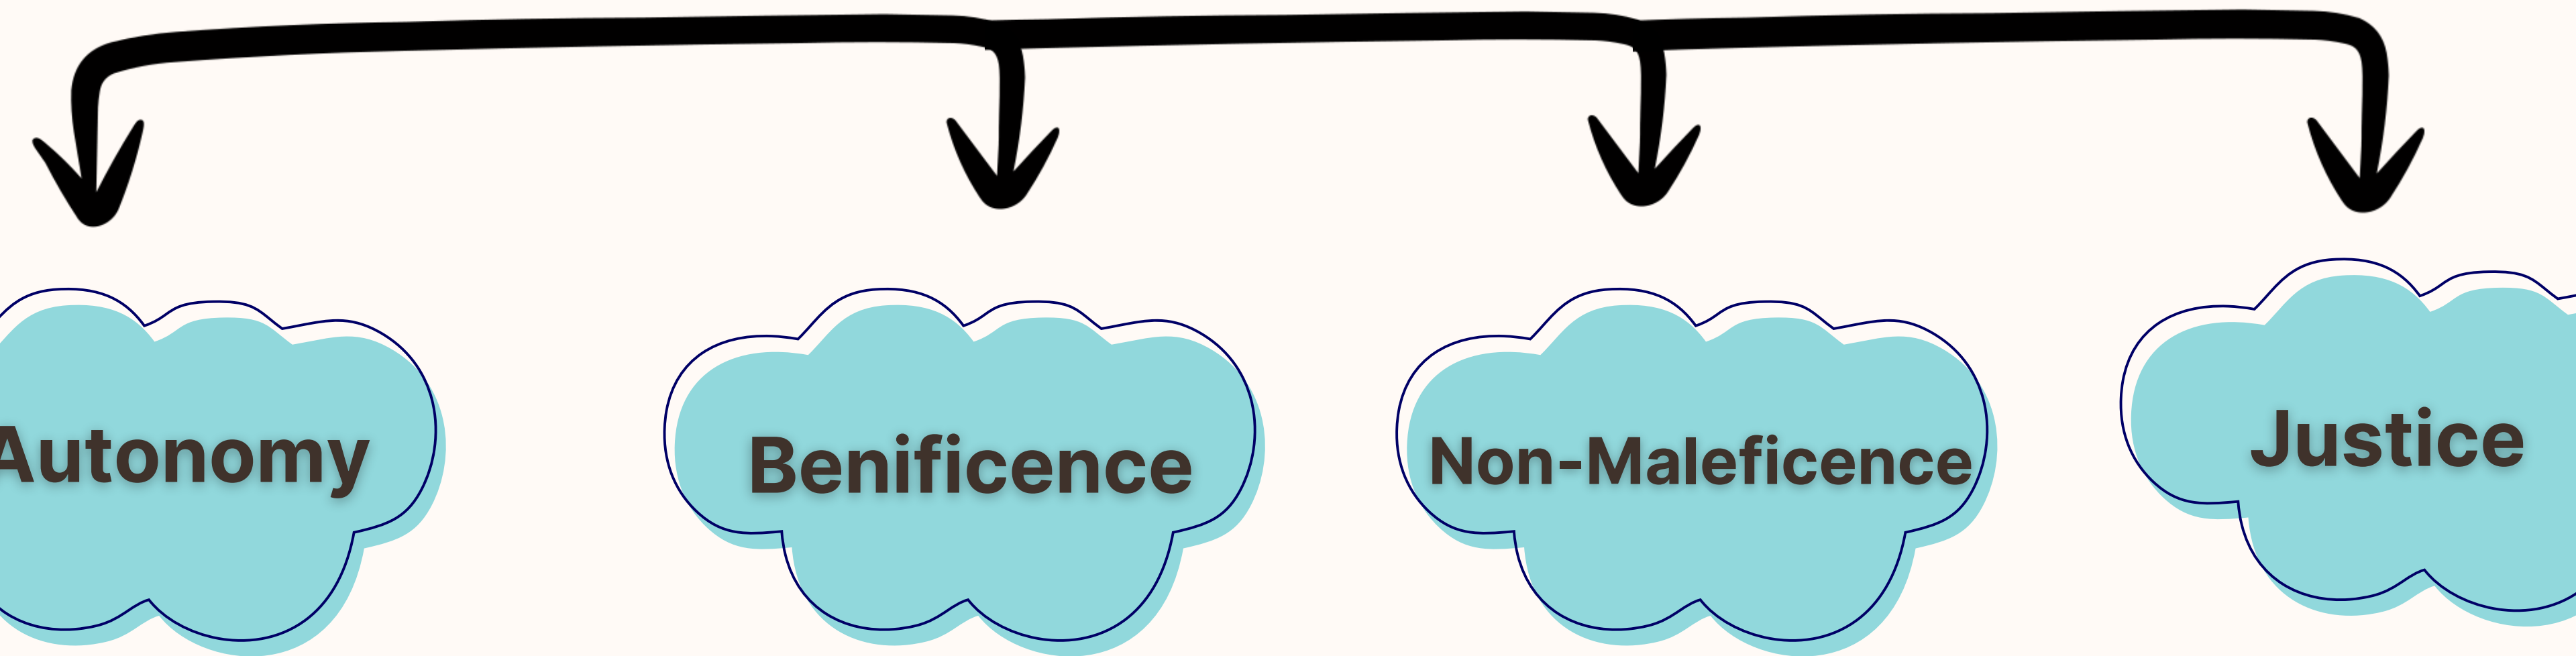

PRINCIPL OF BIOMEDICAL ETHICS

James Childress & Tom Beauchamp

FOUR MAIN PRINCIPLES

Autonomy

It means that patients have the right to make their own decisions regarding their healthcare, as long as they are mentally capable and fully informed.

Non-Maleficence

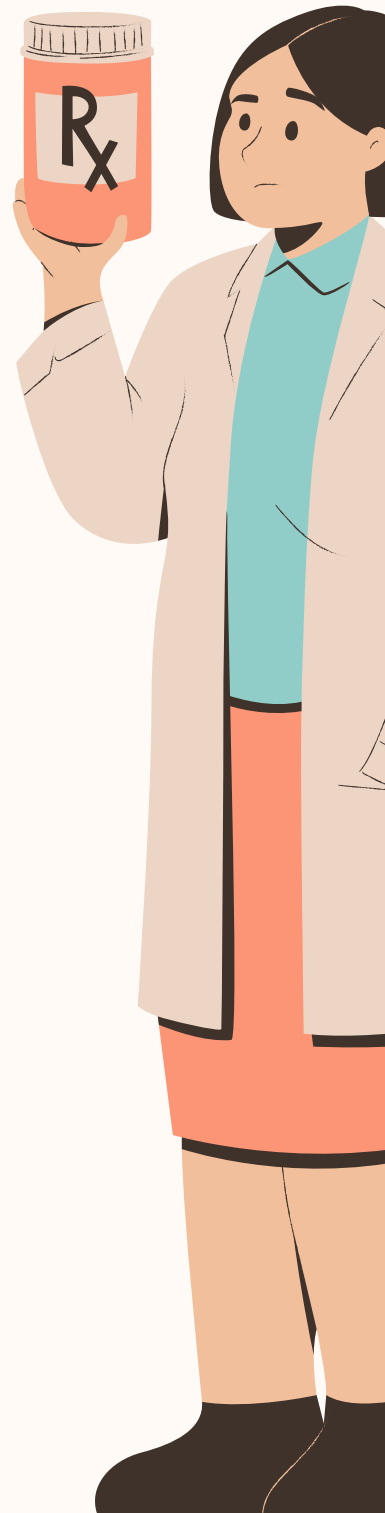

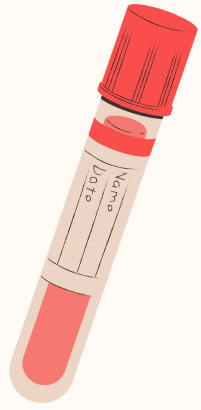

It means "Do No Harm."
It is about avoiding actions that can cause unnecessary harm or risk

Beneficence

It is about helping the patient and doing what benefits them the most.

Justice

It refers to fairness in healthcare.
All patients should be treated equally and have equal access to quality care

EXAMPLES

- 1- Not performing surgery on an elderly patient because the risk is too high.
- 2- A doctor gives painkillers to a patient after surgery to help them feel better.
- 3- A doctor refuses to give antibiotics for a viral infection
(because it won't help and might cause harm)
- 4- A patient refuses chemotherapy even though the doctor recommends it
- 5- A doctor spends equal time with all patients, regardless of their background.
